MURDER AT A CAMP-MEETING .- The Metho dists of Center county. Pa., bad their camp-meeting this year at Milesburg, near Williams-port near the border line of Maryland. Everyng progressed finely until Wednesday even ng last, when, as the multitude were at prayer near the preachers' cottage, cries of murde were heard. The prayer was brought to a quick close, and the confregation repaired to the place whence they proceeded. There lay a man, stretched at full length, in his own gore. He bied protucely from a terrible gash in his left side, in the region of the heart, another in the stomach, and another upon the left cheek. He was evidently in the agonies of death, and in reply to questions put to him only found at ength to gasp that his name was Dennis Yor-

From the bystanders the following particulars of the afray were gleaned:—A party of roughs from Williamsport had been on the ground all lay, and had tried upon more than one occasion to disturb the proceedings of the meeting. In one instance they had insulted a young lady in attendance at the meeting while she lingered upon the skirt of the camp meeting ground. At another time they created a disturbance in front of a fant in which religious worship was being held. Yoric', had met some members of this in his perambulations through the and had remonstrated with them for their conduct. Hard words ensued, and one of the party, Warren by name swore that he would have Yorick's life Yorick thought nothing of the threat until he saw Warren, much under the influence of liquor, approach him with a large carving knife.
As soon as he had got up to him the man drew the knife and plunged it three times into Yorick's body, inflicting the injuries described. The murderer was too drunk at the time of the ommission of the deed to know what he was about. The sight of blood and of a dying man cemed to bring him to his senses. As soon as e realized the extent of the crime of which he ad been guilty he turned and fled, and owing the exchement which prevailed at the time. he managed to escape. At last accounts he had not been arrested. Vigorous efforts are being made to secure him, and large rewards are or
